

Case studyClient: Airis Energy*The brief

Airis wanted to improve their 'front of house' as regards the look and feel of their brochures, sales reports, quotations and proposals.

They also wanted to have a 'fixed term' relationship:

Where they could retain editable documents in-house to reduce their reliance on us in the future.

What we did

Having reviewed documents and slide deck presentations, we asked for the person who would be responsible for updating the documents.

After a chat, we determined that the best way to deliver maximum flexibility and quality of documents was Adobe InDesign.

With editable fields in key positions, any type of document can be created in house. We also offer full training and ongoing support.

The results

A much smoother, looking front-of-house resulting in more sales conversions.
